Support EAST TIMOR

Support a midwife

The team heading back from a mobile clinic

Australian Aid International (AAI) is a Non-government organization working in East Timor in collaboration with the Ministry of Health providing much needed health services to the people of East Timor.

Atauro, a small and remote island 47km north of Dili, is one of the most needy communities in East Timor. Poor road access and rough sea conditions limit access to current health services. Primary health care services on the island are limited and an unreliable weekly ferry service to Dili, makes it difficult for people to access the hospital on the mainland.

Travel by outrigger boat around the island

AAI has been working on the Island of Atauro, with a view of helping the community long term. A team of volunteer doctors and nurses together with local staff provide essential mobile and outreach clinic

HOW YOU CAN HELP: Support a Midwife!!!

Adara is a small isolated community on the western part of the island of Atauro. There is no road access and people must endure either long hours walking under the sun in rugged terrain, or travel by outrigger boat in often unsafe sea conditions to access the Community Health Centre. This becomes even more problematic in the rainy season from December to March.

Your support will enable AAI to help fund and support a local dual trained nurse and midwife who will be based in the community of Adara. This will give the community health services they very much need such as reproductive health, mother and child health, daily medical care and health education.
